Devika Kapoor

Life & Work Design Coach · Manchester

"I help people make sense of themselves."

Devika works with people whose life looks right on paper and has stopped fitting, and with organisations who want their people to work in a way that is actually sustainable. Seven years self employed. She has run a freelancing programme at Reform Radio for three years, ten cohorts and over a hundred freelancers, and delivers talks and workshops for the NHS, GMCA, the Royal College of Physicians, Merseyrail, Catch22 and the University of Manchester. She is booked for the read: she gets to the real thing fast, in front of a room as readily as across a table, and audiences leave with something they can act on rather than something they enjoyed.

Living by Design, Not by Default

Most people never chose the career they are in. They accepted a sequence of reasonable decisions and the role grew around them. They leave able to name one thing they have been accepting by default, and what it is costing them. Devika left hers at twenty seven and has spent seven years helping people choose on purpose.

Stop Overriding Yourself

Your most capable people are overriding themselves, and you usually find out when they leave or break. Why it happens, what the early signals look like, and what changes when people understand how they actually operate. Teams leave knowing their own signals; managers leave knowing what to watch for. Drawn from three years of development programmes and the book Devika is writing on the subject.

Work by Design™

Most teams are built for an average person who does not exist. This session maps how your people actually work and designs the conditions around that, rather than asking them to withstand conditions that do not fit. Teams leave with a shared language for how each person operates; managers leave with specific changes to make. Most recently delivered at Generator, Manchester.
